The image shows a dark, almost black, granular surface with a complex, crystalline texture. There are numerous small, light-colored inclusions and some larger, more distinct mineral grains scattered throughout. The overall appearance is that of a dark-colored rock or mineral specimen. At the bottom center, the text "Labrador Scuro" is overlaid in a white, sans-serif font.

Labrador Scuro

The image shows a close-up of a marbled paper pattern. The background is a complex, organic mix of light grey, off-white, and muted reddish-brown or terracotta tones. The pattern consists of irregular, vein-like shapes and speckles, creating a textured, stone-like appearance. The colors are distributed unevenly, with some areas appearing more saturated than others.

Moon White

Volga Blue

A high-magnification microscopic image of Viscon White paper. The image displays a complex, fibrous network of cellulose fibers. The fibers are oriented in various directions, creating a dense, interwoven structure. The color is a uniform, light gray, typical of a micrograph of a white material. The texture is highly irregular and porous, characteristic of a paper's internal structure.
